

Alex Yuen

Alex Yuen, along with his sisters, “grew up” on the main street of Collingwood with his parents owning the Bamboo Terrace for 37 years. Despite the fact that the restaurant was sold in 2001, the family still has real estate holdings on both Hurontario Street and Ste. Marie Street. Gen and Betty Yuen were extremely proud to be a part of the Collingwood business community and have instilled both that pride and responsibility to Alex at a very young age.

In May of 2014, Alex became an active participant in the Collingwood business community with the opening of the Collingwood Olive Oil Company on Ste. Marie Street with his spouse Cheryl McMenemy.

As a real estate stakeholder on Hurontario Street and a business operator on Ste. Marie Street, Alex is uniquely qualified to listen and address concerns within the entire business improvement area.

From 1994-2000, Alex served on the Downtown Board of Management as both chair of the association as well as the Collingwood Elvis Festival. In the most recent term, Alex has served four years as the BIA’s Administration Chair. His local business awards include Small Business Owner of the Year and Innovative Business of the Year.

In past board appointments, Alex has demonstrated a thoughtful approach to issues and has always been respectful of others and differing opinions. His quick intelligent wit makes him a welcome and positive addition to any team. Most importantly, he is very approachable and listens with genuine interest.

Through both a deeply rooted passion of “everything Collingwood” and a sense of responsibility to serve and give back, Alex has filed his nomination papers to return to the BIA Board of Management and asks for your support.
